I'll just thank myself, shall I?

You've spent a small fortune in the restaurant. The food was delicious. The drinks, divine. You're leaving. You're heading to the door. You're trying to make eye contact. To say goodbye. They don't look up. They're chatting amongst themselves. They're looking at a screen. "You're welcome, ta" you mutter.

Downer. You only wanted a smile and a "thanks for your visit". Not too much to ask, is it?

Sometimes it's the little things that make us return. Or decide to do business again.

Often, it's the unexpected gesture that keeps us coming back. The complimentary digestif. A small gift in the mail.

Or just a simple thank you.

Nobody sends
Christmas Cards
any more, Granddad.

Yeh, we hear that a lot. And, surprisingly, it's utter tinselrot.

Of course they do.

Granted, you probably got fewer Christmas Cards last year than in 1999.

But think about one you did get. Did you open it and think "They shouldn't have bothered"? Did you baubles.

You thought "ah, cute". Or "megalolz, that made me smile" or "oh yeh, I was meaning to get back in touch with them."

They say some things are best left unsaid.

But "thank you" isn't one of them.
